Session impressions involve a group of massive, masonry, grey-brownish, almost art nouveau type structures, the spaces between which are thronged with crowds who have the feel of being an audience or present to give obeisance/allegiance. There seems to be a person present on a raised platform like a stage or podium who is there to address the people. The whole setting has the feeling of a culture that is a combination of Eastern and Western. This person seems to be male, and there is a sense that he is important in his own right, but equally or perhaps even more important as one of a small group of other important figures who work together towards a common goal or responsibility. There is an impression somewhat of political activity involved. The person sees himself as part of a master plan, AOL of Pope.

Person is low to medium height, wears neutral, dark colored nice clothes "like" curiously out-of-date suits, seems somewhat delicate in features and build. Hair is slightly receding or rather short, and there is an AOL/S of goatee. His smile is almost like a grimace, and he has a lined face. He seems not interested in religion per se, but does have a somewhat mystical bent of mind. He has an inclination towards hard sciences in his interests and attitudes, but science is not an important element in his life. He sees the United States as a distant entity to be reckoned with and used or exploited to advantage in achieving his own agenda, but US is not recognized necessarily as either a friend or enemy.

He is widely respected and highly regarded by the people who know him, though some tinge of fear is involved as well. It's like he is/was powerful and one wouldn't want to anger him. Seems this individual more involved with affairs of the intellect or mind rather than concrete things. There is also a sense of the past, as if individual was perceived as being in the 20's or 30's, and may even not be alive today.
